

Abstract

A device for wireless transmission of a deployment signal is described, which has two processors (SCON, μ C) on both the primary side and the secondary side, which exchange
5 data with one another. A high degree of redundancy is thereby achieved. The wireless transmission is preferably carried out as inductive transmission.

(Figure 2)